Two lessons are reported here. The January meeting of the Lucky Ford group held on the third with Mrs. George Worthey hostess was taken up with instructions given on knitting two-needle socks, and teaching Afghan stitch. She also showed slides of the road construction work on I-75 just east of Horseshoe Lake. The lovely fall shades at this time of the year were especially appreciated. Her Australian correspondent sent several magazines in color and it was interesting to compare the views with several of our own country which could be identical. The February meeting held at Mrs. Marius Rogalle's on the seventh covered part of the lesson on Building Family Security. At the end of the lesson a written quiz was handed out and there were no 100% scores though some came pretty close. Mrs. Rogalle served a delicious lunch and announced the next meeting date would be March 7th with Mrs. Kenneth Reed hostess.

Unusual Job For A Woman

Editor's Note - The following article appeared in the winter issue of "Michigan Hearing", a magazine published by the Michigan Association of Better Hearing of Lansing.

Onalee ("Polly") Smith of Grayling, Michigan, has had an unusual type business for over nine years. It is a hard job for a woman, and especially for a young deaf woman, who lost her hearing at the age of eight. She is an agent for the Detroit Free Press, beginning work just after five o'clock each morning.

Born in Grayling October 2, 1928 to Oscar and Beatrice Smith, she was the youngest of two children. Her sister Dorothy - now Mrs. Don Sorenson - helped her get along in school and she graduated from Grayling High School in 1948.

Onalee started out by using a bicycle. Then she bought a 1939 Plymouth coupe. In 1953 she traded the car in on a truck, the first of three trucks she bought. She is now a good driver with 18 years of experience behind the wheel. She changes her own tires.

"I like a truck better than a car," she says. "My present truck has three rear view mirrors. Outside mirrors are required by state law for deaf drivers, and I use all three to check traffic behind me." She is extremely cautious while driving, especially in winter, although she drives through the snow, sleet or rain, for whatever the weather she has to get the papers to her customers. She says: "The work is very hard but I like it. I don't mind getting up early. I can't say I'm a morning person, but I am pleasant and like old friends."

In mid-summer she gets up even earlier to do considerably more business, largely at the National Guard Camp, five miles away. She handles 350 papers a day on her town route, 500 a day in summer, and 750 each summer Sunday. During the Guard encampment she keeps a boy working regularly in town, while she makes the trips to camp with from nine to 14 boys daily. Her mother helps her too.

In camp the boys, 12 to 15 years old, walk from tent to tent, or march to messhall, selling papers, while she drives up and down giving more papers to boys who sell out. They average about 80 papers each day there, selling about three hours while the men are leaving for the field, about 7:30 a. m.

In one July week they sold 4800 papers at camp. Other weeks selling days are more limited, as the men go on bivouacs. In August the camp is in use all month, mostly with outstate Guards, when their average sales run from 400 to 450 papers on a week day, 500 on Sunday.

Onalee has little time for recreation in summer, but goes swimming and boating when she can. In the fall she hunts small game, one year bagging 18 rabbits with a 22 caliber rifle. She also hunts deer with her father, brother-in-law, uncles or friends. She does not hear the hunting dogs bark but if anyone is with her, when a dog barks a partner signals and points, and she keeps her eye on the lookout.

In winter she goes ice-fishing and bowling. And she is also interested in photography, including movies, as well as in oil painting, reading and watching television.

She says: "My eyes are my ears. I am a lipreader, and understand most people who talk to me." She highly recommends the study of lipreading for the deaf or hard of hearing.

She loves dogs. "My dog, Sambo, is my car, too," she said. "I'm never alone while I have him." She babysits, helps 11 friends, helps aged persons with heavy work, and runs errands for some of her customers.

Asked if she would recommend her kind of job to other deaf women, she replied: "No, I wouldn't, unless they could really take it. They'd have to be very dependable, roll out early, check all the boys' troubles with the customers and everything."

But Onalee Smith can take it.

Jim Hall left Thursday for Ann Arbor to spend a couple of days working at the University, then went on to Grosse Ile Naval Base for his Reserve duty for the week-end.

Girl Scout News TROOP FOUR

At our court of honor meeting we went over our plans for all scout meetings for the remainder of the year. Our new patrol system is now running smoothly with the patrol leaders taking charge of their own books and collecting dues and marking roll.

We worked today on our Girl Scout Scrapbooks and most of the girls are making progress sheets of their work in scouting. Some of the girls made valentines with materials furnished by Mrs. Nellist. Next week's meeting will be held at Mrs. Nellist's house in the studio. We will be working with clay for our Arts and Crafts project.

We heard a record of Girl Scout songs which we all enjoyed very much and also had a treat of valentine candy.

Call - Miller of Robin - Patrol taught us a new game. We formed the friendship circle and sang Taps.

Scribe, Terry Denewett; Leaders Mrs. Nellist, Mrs. Johnson.
